New Premises for Lusty EMS South Australia

In response to increased demand for its services and as part of an initiative to strengthen and further grow its relationship with southern based operators, Lusty EMS South Australia is proud to announce the relocation of their South Australian Office and Service Centre to new premises at 104-106 Wing Street, Wingfield.

With new opportunities emerging and having outgrown its previous centre, the new Lusty EMS base will provide customers with access to the best available sales, service, repair and support for their trailers.

The new premise provides easy access for all semi-trailers and B-Double combinations and offers full workshop service and repairs including fabrication for steel and aluminium. The facility also contains a large pit with drive through accessibility for B-Double combinations.

Sales Manager for Lusty EMS South Australia, Kym Penhall, said that despite the current economic downturn in the transport industry, his region was capitalising on the opportunities that still existed in the market.

He added, "More importantly, our new base has ensured our focus is on customers receiving the best value added services that allow them to keep their equipment performing better for longer, which really is a necessity for operators in these challenging times."

With a team of nine personnel involved in sales, administration, repairs and service, staff have welcomed the update to new facilities with Kym adding that "Whilst we were proud of our previous site, this new base is a demonstration of our passion and commitment to constantly find new ways to increase our service levels in all areas of customer care, from after-sales support to ongoing service requirements and mechanical repairs."

Not to simply rest there, Lusty EMS already has plans underway to install a Nitrogen tyre filling station which will provide an added value service for owner drivers and fleet operators. The use of Nitrogen reduces variations in tyre pressure and tyres also operate at a cooler temperature, resulting in less tyre wear.

Each vehicle is then registered and a database will allow operators to obtain a report and monitor their tyre usage and condition.

Lusty EMS's national dealer network prides itself on providing the best available service and repair support, whether it is a routine service or a major accident repair. All dealers and staff have decades of experience and knowledge behind them, so customers can be assured their needs and requirements are been cared for.

Operating hours for the Lusty EMS South Australia remain unchanged, with both the office and the repair and service centre open from 7:30am to 5:30pm during weekdays. For all sales enquiries, please contact Kym Penhall on 0428 559 201 or kym.penhall@lustyems.com.au.
